WEDNESDAY EVEN'G., OCTOBER 11.

Policy in Politics, -Quite a crowd gathered on Rose street this morning around two men, one of whom had evidently been dranking and was in ugly temper. His opponent was much the better man, physically and intellectually, but, though roundly abused and insultd, he made no attempt to punish the fellow. ilis coolness excited the curiosity of a by stander, who inquired: "Why don't you knock that chap's head off? You could do it to quick

"Of course I could," was the calm reply; "but if I strike nim erysipelas may set in and send bim to the hospital, where he might stay until after election and we'd lose his

"But you'l! hit him after election?" "I will. Just as soon as the polls are closed I'll hunt him up and bang his head so that it will ache from that day to Fourth of July! '-New York Telegram.
